Description of Property

The property at 1350 Wharncliffe Road South is located in the City of London on the south side of Wharncliffe Road South, south of the intersection of Wharncliffe Road South and Bradley Avenue. The property contains two residences (a main residence and secondary residence), a heavily modified barn, two outbuildings, and a spruce and cedar tree windbreak. The main residence on the property was built between 1911 and 1918 and is an example of an Ontario vernacular structure with Colonial Revival and Craftsman design influences. Between 1911 and 1965 the property was known as Weldwood Farm and was operated as an experimental farm by the Farmer's Advocate, an agricultural journal based in London.

SCHEDULE “B”
To By-law No. L.S.P.-

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The main residence at 1350 Wharncliffe Road South has design value as a representative example of an early 20th century Ontario vernacular residence with Colonial Revival and Craftsman design elements. Vernacular design elements of the main residence include its painted brick exterior, concrete block foundation, and incorporation of Colonial Revival and Craftsman design elements, styles popular in the early 20th century. Colonial Revival design elements include its general massing and layout of the residence. The shed roof dormer and full-width balcony and porch are elements of the Craftsman design style. The Colonial Revival design style was popular in North America after 1900 and into the present, while the Craftsman style was popular from about 1905-1930.

The property demonstrates historical and associative value through its association with John Weld, Farmer’s Advocate, Weldwood Farm, and I.B. Whale. John Weld was a prominent Canadian publisher and agriculturalist who owned several enterprises including the William Weld Publishing Company, the London Printing and Lithographing Company, and the Bryant Press. Weld was born in Delaware Township and later resided in the City of London. In 1910, he purchased land on the property for an experimental farm for the magazine Farmer’s Advocate. The magazine was founded in 1866 by William Weld, the father of John Weld. The magazine was an important resource for Canadian farmers. The magazine used Weldwood Farm to investigate and test new agricultural equipment, crops, livestock, and farming methods. The farm was frequently visited by other farmers to inspect and learn from the practices undertaken at Weldwood Farm and therefore was an important part of Farmer’s Advocate and maintaining its credibility as an important source for agricultural information. Weldwood Farm was managed from 1918 to 1959 by I.B. Whale. Under his superintendence, Weldwood Farm was responsible for pioneering the use of sweet clover for use in pastures and soil improvement and aiding in the development of techniques for the effective cultivation of corn crops in southwestern Ontario. Whale diligently reported his findings in a frequent column he wrote for Farmer’s Advocate.

The property has contextual value as it is historically and visually linked to its surroundings. The farmhouse was originally sited at the end of a long laneway, accessed from Wharncliffe Road South.
