

Darren Chapman is a full-time professor in the LKSB at Fanshawe College for past 12 years. He came to Fanshawe after twenty-five years in international marketing in the medical industry. He has represented faculty in a number of roles and committees including online delivery, student feedback survey, Union-College committee where his rationality and honesty have been pivotal in re-establishing a respectful and constructive working relationship between the faculty association and management. Having sat on various boards, he is familiar with the roles, duties and the governance model. He is keenly interested and engaged in various levels of politics and urban communities having earned his HBA in Economics and Public Administration (York '86), ran as a city councilor in 2000. Darren's dry sense of humor originates by being born an optimist and raised by a pessimist. His favoured approach when working through opportunities or challenges is to build consensus towards achieving the goal while pragmatically identifying potential barriers to success. Among various interests and activities, Darren enjoys civics, mentoring future entrepreneurs, attempting golf, coaching curling and playing with sophisticated kitchen gadgets. He can be reached through: chipreader@gmail.com , chapmanlive.blogspot.ca