Contract extensions have been executed in 2003, 2005, 2007, 2009, 2010, 2012, and 2014.

BACKGROUND

In November, 1998, the Province introduced the Community Policing Partnerships (CPP) Program. The program was initiated as a five year partnership between the province and municipalities where the Ontario Government provides fifty percent of salary and benefit costs to a maximum of $30,000 per allocated officer. The program is intended to increase police presence and support targeted enforcement initiatives addressing high crime areas such as residential break and enters, vehicle thefts, crimes impacting neighbourhoods, and street crime. The London Police Service receives funding for 30 front-line officers representing annual revenue of $900,000.

Contract extensions have been executed in 2003, 2005, 2007, 2009, 2010, 2012 and 2014. The amendment is for the period from April 1, 2016 through March 31, 2017.
