Ontario Intercommunity Bus Policy Proposal

The Ministry of Transportation's Proposal for Intercommunity Buses – Have Your Say

The Ministry of Transportation would like to improve transportation between Ontario communities and wants to hear from you. The 2016 Ontario Budget Jobs for Today and Tomorrow announced consultations to discuss options for promoting new and innovative choices for intercommunity passenger travel.

As part of these consultations, the Ministry will be engaging with municipal leaders, Indigenous communities, industry operators, social and health service providers, and other interested parties across the province.

You are invited to review the Ministry's proposal to improve passenger travel between communities and have your say. You will also have the opportunity to answer some key questions on your vision for the future of Ontario's bus services. Working together, we can move forward to facilitate new, innovative and sustainable intercommunity passenger transportation services in Ontario.

You can find more information on the in person sessions or have your say online at the Intercommunity Bus Modernization engagement hub.

The terms “intercity” and “intercommunity” are being used interchangeably. The Ministry recognizes the importance of passenger travel between cities as well as other types of communities.
