

I forgot to mention I'd like this letter to be recognized "on the record" as a submission for the 17 July meeting.

July 10, 2017

Dear city of London planning department,

It is absolutely mind bending that planing would even consider a slaughterhouse operation directly beside residential homes and a long standing berry farm.

These slaughterhouse operations need to be in wide open spaces, far away from residential homes, have proper drainage and adhere to all the various municipal, provincial and federal rules and regulations.

The rezoning applicant in this case has demonstrated an arrogant disregard for all those rules for the past 8 years and indeed a new video of sheep back on the property was uploaded just three days ago on July 7, 2017 showing a defiant disregard to present charges and a demand that no farm animals be on the property until charges have been dealt with.

This repeat offender application has no case, no merit, the property has been severed as a single family dwelling and needs to remain that category for the safety and immediate neighbours undisturbed use of their private property..
