PREVIOUS REPORTS PERTINENT TO THIS MATTER

None.

BACKGROUND
-------------------

Location

440 Grey Street is a property located on the north side of Grey Street, between Maitland and Colborne Streets in the SoHo District. The Beth Emanuel Church (and site of the relocated formative Fugitive Slave Chapel) is located several properties to the west of 440 Grey Street [Appendix A]. It is currently listed as a single-family dwelling.

Property

The property is included on the Inventory of Heritage Resources which was adopted as the Register in 2007. It is listed as a priority 3 resource. Priority 3 buildings may not be worthy of individual designation under Part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act, but may merit designation as part of a group of buildings as part of a Heritage Conservation District (City of London Inventory of Heritage Resources, np).

Description

The building located at 440 Grey Street is a one-storey, buff “London brick” Ontario Cottage circa 1880. It exhibits many of the characteristics of this architectural style including a square plan, low, hipped roof, and symmetrical façade with a central doorway that is flanked by two identical windows. The façade is three-bay and well-proportioned, with a small gable over the front entrance. The two front windows appear to be original—two-over-two sash windows (w/newer storms added), and curved segmented brick coursing at window heads. Some windows at the east and west elevations appear to be newer replacement windows. What appears to be a Mason’s mark is found at the front east corner, about 3’-0” above grade [Appendix B].

There is a partial height basement at the rear of the building. The back property and interior of the building were not viewed during the site visit on July 27th due to the absence of the applicant, which would have allowed for fuller access of the property. An outbuilding at the rear of the property is of note as its construction possibly coincides with that of the primary building (Insurance Plan, 1912 Rev. 1915).

440 Grey Street is a very modest, working-class home of the period, and many of the property’s early residents were labourers working at the Grand Trunk and Grand Western Railway, General Steel Wares Ltd and McClary Mfg. (City Directory). There are though, several attributes adding embellishment to this modest cottage that are of particular note. These include original panelled entrance door surround, transom etched coloured glass illustrating the house number, rounded brick arched window opening in centre gable, and stringer brickwork creating a panelled pilaster effect on the front façade. 442 Grey Street is a “mirror twin” of 440, but it has undergone alterations to the exterior brickwork, window openings, front entrance and gable so that little remains of what were probably once details that were shared with 440 Grey Street.

The area surrounding 440 Grey Street is commonly known as the SoHo (South of Horton) Neighbourhood, and has existed within the same boundaries since London’s inception in 1840. Historically, this area has been associated with the Black settlement in London during the mid-1800’s, and its early days as a place of refuge on the Underground Railroad. Over half of the properties in and around 440 Grey Street still remain and date from well before 1900.

Demolition Request

A request for the demolition of the heritage listed property was submitted by the owners on July 10, 2017 and deemed complete on July 24, 2017. A request for the demolition of a heritage listed property must be resolved by Municipal Council within a 60-day period and must provide for a public participation meeting before the Planning and Environment Committee and consultation with the London Advisory Committee on Heritage. If Municipal Council does not make a decision on the demolition request by September 22, 2017, the request is deemed permitted.

POLICY REVIEW
----------------------

Section 2.6.1 of the Provincial Policy Statement (2014) directs that “significant built heritage resources and significant cultural heritage landscapes shall be conserved.” “Significant” is defined in the Provincial Policy Statement (2014) as, in regards to cultural heritage and archaeology, “resources that have been determined to have cultural heritage value or interest for the important contribution they make to our understanding of the history of a place, and event, or a people.” The objectives of Chapter 13 (Heritage) of the City of London’s Official Plan (1989, as amended), as well as the policies of The London Plan (adopted 2016), comply with these policies. The Strategic Plan for the City of London 2015-2019 identifies heritage conservation as an integral part of “Building a Sustainable City.”

Register

Municipal Council may include properties on the Register that it “believes to be of cultural heritage value or interest.” These properties are not designated, but are considered to have potential cultural heritage value or interest. 440 Grey Street is considered to have potential cultural heritage value or interest as a heritage listed property.

CULTURAL HERITAGE EVALUATION
-------------------------------------

In the Inventory of Heritage Resources, it states that further research is required to determine the cultural heritage value or interest of heritage listed properties. The potential cultural heritage value or interest of the property at 440 Grey Street was determined using the criteria of the Ontario Heritage Act Regulation 9/06. These criteria determine cultural heritage value or interest of individual properties based on the following:

- i. Physical or design value;
- ii. Historical or associative value; and/or,
- iii. Contextual value.

A property is required to meet one or more of the abovementioned criteria to merit protection under Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act. Should the property not meet the criteria for designation, the demolition request should be granted.

A site visits was undertaken by the Heritage Planner on July 27, 2017.

A brief summary of the evaluation is provided below:
