Hello Anna Maria

I fully support your letter and recommendations about the Drewlo Development at 661-667 Talbot Street.

Especially these points:

1) An Environmental Impact Study on using the green space slope behind these addresses is crucial to proper modern urban planning.

2) A mixture of 1 and two bedroom apartments should be included in the building permit approval process, including some geared to income apartments as this is reflective of the surrounding community. Drewlo can still make a profit.

In my opinion this developer, Drewlo, can wait a little longer to start this building project. It is the shared opinion of many in the City of London that Drewlo has already been patient enough to let a heritage property deteriorate to the point where it had to be demolished, thereby making the property available to be developed to suit it's purpose. We call it "Demolation by Neglect Strategy".
